STARK CASE RAISES COMPLEX QUESTIONS

Former Rock County Resident Seeks Seat in The Next Legislature —Was Elected.
Rock county residents are much interested in Charles W. Stark's attempt to take his seat as member of the next state senate as representative from the ninth district. Mr. Stark, will be remembered as having had charge of the Fairchild campaign in Rock county two years ago. He is a son of Charles Stark of Shople, and a graduate of the state university. He is also a brother-in-law of Charles Weirick of this city and has many friends here who will watch his case with interest. According to an exchange:
"In case Charles W. Stark, Jr., senator-elect from the Ninth senatorial district, pushes his claim to his seat, many complications may follow. Mr. Stark said on Wednesday that he could not say what he would do, but would decide within a short time.
"Mr. Stark was a candidate for senator from the new Ninth district comprising the First, Second, Third and Fourth wards of this city. The old Ninth district comprised Adams, Marquette, Waushara and Wood counties, and was represented by Senator E. F. Kileen, a holdover senator. In the apportionment made by the legislature of 1911 Mr. Kileen was put in the new Twenty-first district, comprising Waushara, Adams, Juneau and Marquette counties. While his old number was transferred to the new Milwaukee senatorial district.
It is claimed on the part of Mr. Stark that the new Ninth district is now unrepresented as no one of the holdover senators resides in it.
"If Mr. Stark pushes his claim it will be through quo warranto proceedings and the case will be taken directly to the Supreme court if possible so as to obtain a decision at the earliest possible moment. If the court should support his contention it is said it would result in knocking out the appointment of 1911 so far as it relates to senatorial districts. In such case a new apportionment of senatorial districts would be necessary. The legislature would have to suspend operations until a new election is held, say those who have looked into the matter closely.
"If this claim is correct the question would arise who would make the new apportionment. The case could not be taken before the Supreme court before the first of January and the old legislature goes out of existence Jan. 1.
"There is said by attorneys to be a possibility that the court may seat Mr. Stark and unseat one of the sitting senators. In such case it would appear Senator Kileen's seat is in danger as he is now representing a district miles away from where he resides. Taken altogether the Stark case presents interesting as well as perplexing problems. Its progress will be watched with the keenest interest by politicians."

CALL FOR MEETING OF TOWN CHAIRMEN

Complication of Highway Matters Due to Death of Highway Commissioner Will Be Settled.
Members of the county board representing the various townships will hold a meeting at the county clerk's office on Tuesday, Dec. 10, at ten o'clock in the morning for the purpose of settling any matters relating to the county highway construction. The meeting is made necessary by the death of County Highway Commissioner Jones. Numerous pieces of work remain unfinished in several townships and the various chairmen will check over the work which is still to be done and that which has been finished with the members of Committee No. 6, on highways. Mr. Jones' records and papers pertaining to the year's work have been received at the clerk's office and will be taken in charge by the committee which is composed of C. E. Moore of Magnolia, chairman, B. D. Treadway, Beloit and P. M. Roach, Harmony.

VAN DYKE POEM ENJOYED BY HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

For two days Prof. Buell has taken the opening exercises for reading a poem by Van Dyke to the student body. "The Telling of Felix" was the subject, and it took one back to the olden times, when Egypt was preme, and when everyone was looking for the Master. In this poem, Felix is described as an old Egyptian philosopher living in an old hut alone, and looking for the Master. On one day of the year, he would make his appearance before his friends, who were there to make him presents of food, and anything of the sort, and make a blessing to someone of that time. The whole story was a peculiar one to hear, and while it was hard to understand, still it was interesting to the many who heard it.

MRS. FIDLEY ENTERTAINS FOR MRS. ETHEL JOHNSON

Mrs. A. E. Fidley, 401 Milton avenue, very pleasantly entertained at her home last evening in honor of Mrs. Ethel McDowell Johnson, who is soon to leave Janesville to make her future home in Milton. At ten o'clock a three-course luncheon was served, after which the guests departed, leaving many beautiful gifts as tokens of remembrance. About thirty were present. The out-of-town guests were, Miss Eva Johnson, Edgerton; Misses Nora and Mary Roach and Dilla McDowell of Harmony.

ENTERTAINED BY CONCERT COMPANY

Wolcott-Norfleet Trio Gave Delightful Program at Presbyterian Church Last Evening.
At the Presbyterian church last evening the Wolcott-Norfleet concert company gave the third number of the lecture course. The company comprises the Misses Helen Louise Wolcott and Helen Lucile and Catherine Marie Norfleet, and the entertainment in which they took part last evening was by far the most pleasing of any given thus far. The program was varied in its nature and was particularly well arranged. The church auditorium where the lecture was held was well filled and a hearty applause was given each number and a number of encores were given.
The program opened with a violin solo by Miss Catherine Norfleet, her sister playing the accompaniment. The number was the last movement of Mendelssohn's Concerto in E Minor, and was exceptionally well played. In this and in the other selections played by Miss Norfleet she showed remarkable ability and considerable talent. Her sister, Miss Helen Norfleet, is an accomplished pianist, equally as capable in her musical work as the violinist, if not more so. She displayed wonderful interpretive power in the different selections she played and her work was given the applause it deserved.
Miss Helen Louise Wolcott, the other member of the trio, is a reader and impersonator of unusual power. Her dialect sketches were especially pleasing, and her impersonations, especially those of children, were very good. She has great dramatic ability.

Billy Nolan, managerial dictator, who was with Batling Nelson in his lightest days, is again the pilot of a light-weight champion. Nolan is business manager for Willie Ritchie, who grabbed the crown away from Ad Wolgast on Thanksgiving day. Nolan picked Nelson up after the latter had climbed the steeple slope of the championship ladder, and fell into an easy way of money. Before Bat lost to Wolgast he and Nolan had had a falling out. Two months ago he lined up Ritchie and steered him into the bout with Wolgast, although Ritchie signed the articles.

San Francisco ought to be satisfied. With Willie Ritchie lightweight champion, the coast may now be made that every pugilistic crown at some time rested upon the head of a San Franciscan. Two heavyweights, James J. Corbett and James J. Fries, have at different times brought the title of the big fellows to San Francisco. Joe Thomas was hailed as middleweight king. Abe Attell for years was the topnotcher of the featherweights. Frankie Neil fought his way to the leadership of the bantams. Before Ritchie, Jimmy Britt was the only San Franciscan who ever got near the lightweight crown. And his hopes were quenched by Batling Nelson.

By reason of his spectacular playing in the recent championship bil-

COLLECTION OF FALL SPAWN IS COMPLETED

Fish Commission Has 68,000,000 Eggs In Several Hatcheries to be Cared For During Winter.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 5.—The Wisconsin Fish Commission has just completed the collection of eggs from the varieties of fish that spawn in the fall; the brook trout, lake trout and bluefish. The commission now has a total of 68,000,000 eggs in the several hatcheries. These must be cared for during the winter months; they will hatch during the early spring, and during April, May and June will be distributed to the streams and lakes to which they are adapted.

On the whole the collection was not as satisfactory as the members desired. This year, while collecting lake trout eggs from Lake Michigan waters, severe wind storms wrought great havoc with the fishermen's nets, for a severe wind storm so riddles the nets that nothing is left but the seaming cord, floats and leads. The commission places its men on the fishermen's boats to spawn the ripe fish as they come from the nets, and also to care for the eggs. On the Great Lakes this work at times becomes quite hazardous. The men also are apt to become seasick as they are on the water only in the fall, the spawning seasons of the fish.

Use Spring Spawn.
The greatest number of game fish planted in Wisconsin's inland lakes are fish that spawn in the spring, such as the pike, bass and pickerel. The eggs from the pike and pickerel are collected in the spring as soon as the ice leaves the lakes and rivers. This must be done in a very short period as the spawning season lasts only about ten days. The spawning time in the southern part of the state is usually from fifteen to twenty days earlier than that in the northern part. The bass is an exception to the rule, their spawning time is all over the state generally lasting from about the first to the tenth of June. This is the only variety of fish which protects their nests until the eggs are hatched. The season for bass fishing opens June 1. This is considered to be about twenty days too soon, for the fish should not be caught during their spawning season. Bass eggs are sensitive to a change in the temperature, and if this should drop at a certain time, when the eggs are on the nests, say 7 degrees F., all the eggs will be killed. This happened to a great extent. On June 17 a cold snap killed most of the eggs on the nests in the ponds at Delafield and Minocqua. On June 4 the commission had 175 bass nests with eggs in Bass lake, used in connection with the hatchery at Minocqua. Superintendent James Nevin stated that the cold wave which came on June 10 killed all the eggs on the nests in the lake and not a fish was hatched.

Small Bass Hatch.
Supt. Nevin stated that the Mississippi river is the greatest breeding ground for bass in this state. Usually

The latest wrinkle in billiards is a billiard parlor exclusively for women, recently opened in Kansas City by Mrs. Bertha May King, the champion woman billiard player. It has fifteen tables and woman attendants. "I believe women will be glad to learn the great indoor game if they are provided proper places," says Mrs. King. "Now if many of the public rooms are exclusive enough for women, I propose to make my place one of refinement and exclusiveness where women can learn and enjoy billiards and feel free to come and go. As an evidence of the benefit of the game as an exercise, I can say that since I have played billiards, I have rarely experienced a day's illness."

Many American league experts believe Claude Derrick, former Athletic utility infielder, will star at second base for the New York Yankees next year.

The commission collects a large number of bass minnows from the landlocked ponds and sloughs adjacent to this river, but this year was an exception. After the failure experienced in the hatcheries, the commission planned on obtaining a large collection from the Mississippi, but when the time came for rescuing the fish, the ponds and sloughs were found as barren of bass as the hatchery ponds. Thus it is evident that the bass hatch all over the state was small this year, under natural conditions. This means a great loss to the sportsman and to lovers of game fish.

The greatest number of fish collected this year from the ponds and sloughs adjacent to the Mississippi river were croppies and bullheads. Approximately 360,000 fish were rescued and returned to the main channel of the river.

The Department of Fisheries prefers early applications for fry, as it affords opportunity to make allotments and helps the department in arranging routes and shipments for distribution.

A team of local basketball players, who were formerly members of the Lakota Cardinal squad will meet the Milton college five at Milton tonight. KORST OUT OF RUNNING FOR BELOIT COLLEGE FIVE Injury to Ankle Will Prevent Janesville Youth From Entering Preliminary Practice.

Don Korst of this city, who was making an excellent showing in the preliminary try-outs for the Beloit college basketball team, has been forced to discontinue his work with the squad owing to a severe injury to one of his ankles. Korst, who was one of the fast forwards on the Janesville high school team last year and who made a fine record at basket shooting, had excellent prospects of making the Beloit squad until his unfortunate accident. Emmett Murphy of this city, who played on the high school team several years ago and who formerly played with the Lakota Cardinals, is captain of the Beloit team, being elected this fall when Capt. Puffer did not return to college. Murphy is one of the fastest forwards among the state colleges or in the Little Five conference schools.

MIDDLEWEIGHTS READY FOR NEW YORK BATTLE; CHAMPIONSHIP IS AT STAKE

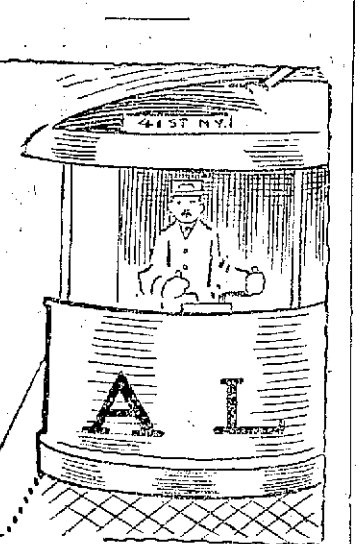

There will be some scrap in New York on Wednesday night when Mike Gibbons of Minneapolis and Eddie McGorty of Oshkosh meet to decide the championship of the middleweight division. Both are as fit as hard work and careful training can make them. Both are confident. For more than a year McGorty has been steadily improving until now he is able to boast of a left hand that seems able to get past any one's guard. The supporters of Gibbons, on the other hand, hold that he is a clever but McGorty will find it next to impossible to get to him. Tim Corbett expects Gibbons to win.

any Beloit attorney can do it. If you do, I will buy a supper for the crowd."

"I will start at 5 o'clock in the morning and telephone to you from farm houses along the way so that you will know I am not beating it into the town on a freight train," said Mr. Buckley. "And I will do it as soon as the ground dries out. I have already walked from Beloit to Delavan and back in one day and I have been walking more or less all my life. I guess a little trip like the one to Madison will not stump me. You will buy that supper as sure as we are both alive and in good health next spring."

"During the winter of a couple of years back four apologies for men became acquainted at one of the several missions in the tenderloin of Philadelphia," says Blair Jaekel in an article on "The Inasmuch Mission," in the "World's Work" for December.

"Each was a 'bum' of the uttermost, guttermost type. Arthur W. Taylor was a college man. He had been brought up in a Christian household by Christian parents. A scion of one of Virginia's oldest families was the second of the quartet, George A. Tyler. Randolph M. Lawrence was a civil engineer. His parents were wealthy, and at the time he commenced his career his prospects for the future were far brighter than the average man.

"The only one of the four who did not fall was George Long. Born and brought up a true son of the tenderloin, he had nothing to fall from.

"These men, converted in a Vine Street mission, descended in a body on 'Hell's Half Acre,' Philadelphia's worst slum, and founded a mission on a combined capital of twenty-seven cents. In two years, conversions believed to be sincere to the number of 1,453, were effected. The founders have computed that the average cost to set a man with the right kind of stuff in him on the road to better things is exactly $2.60.

"In this first year a total of 28,040 men and women attended the nightly services, 11,173 lodgings and 32,162 meals were furnished, 84 children were enrolled in the Sunday school, and more than 1,200 one-time 'hoboes' have received positions in and about the city."

In this age of commercialism almost everything is reduced to a financial basis. The work of "Billy Sunday," the great evangelist, has long been computed in dollars and cents and it is no uncommon thing to read about the $10,000 thank offering and what it represented numerically in transforming lives from sin. The Philadelphia workers were not traveling evangelists. They were familiar with the slums of the city, and the plea they made was to old associates. It cost something to do this, but results warranted the investment of both time and money.

FREAK DANCES.

The city of Sterling, Illinois, has decided that the "Grizzly Bear," the "Turkey Trot," and "Bunny Hug" must go. The proprietors of public dance halls claim that these modern dances are so demoralizing that they can no longer tolerate them. The Sterling Gazette contains the following news story:

"The 'Grizzly Bear' must go. No more will the alluring strains of 'Everybody's Doing It' urge the dancers onto the 'Turkey Trot.' The 'Bunny Hug' is relegated to the scrap heap while the syncopated 'Barn Dance' is in the discard. The city council has decreed it and Haglock is to be made censor in chief to see that the rules and regulations of the new ordinance are properly and efficiently enforced. True, Chief Haglock protests with vehemence that he doesn't know a 'Bunny Hug' from a 'Hootchie Cootchie' and that to him the 'Grizzly Bear' is no different from any other good old fashioned mug, but the council provisions must go. Hence the chief can but do his best.

"The trouble was started by Algerman Heckman, who asserted that he had been approached by parties who give public dances and who requested the passage of such an ordinance. He said that these gentlemen declared that the freak dance proposition had reached such a degree that they were unable to control it and needed an ordinance in order to protect the morals of their patrons. Immediately arose other aldermen to make inquiry as to these new dances. City Attorney Sheldon was called upon, both as an expert dancer and a legal sharp. Mr. Sheldon protested against giving an opinion, asserting in strong language that he was not up-to-date on the latest immorality in dances and could not be taken as an authority. He desired, however, that the council had a right to regulate public dances. If a person chose to give a dance in his own home, however, the city attorney believed that he was entitled to hug and contort as far as he liked, provided his wife, partner and neighbors made no objection.

The days of old fashioned modesty seem to be of the past, and for the first time in the history of the country it has become necessary to regulate society custom by law.

The common council of Racine, recently passed a "masher ordinance" and discussion showed that the girls were as much to blame as the boys.

The modern dance, and scant skirt, are in a measure responsible for the letting down of morality, and conditions are deplorable. It is time for society to call a halt.

The law is no respecter of persons, and recognizes no favored class. The merchant has just as much right to disobey it as the saloon man, and would have no cause for complaint if punishment followed. It is natural that men who have been hurt by the enforcement of law, should have a grievance, and if they happen to be saloon men, it is just as natural that they should have sympathizers, but it is not reasonable to suppose that the public generally should share in this sympathy. If such was the case the respect for law would soon disappear and lawlessness would prevail. Wholesome respect of law is the safeguard of all communities.

The Chicago Evening World, the new Socialistic daily, has suspended for lack of funds. The "World" was the only daily in the city which was not affected by the late pressman strike, and it secured a phenomenal circulation, but circulation without advertising is a money loser, as the paper discovered to its sorrow.

Senator Bristow of Kansas is still a progressive, and yesterday introduced a bill to amend the constitution so that judicial decisions could be recalled. This is one of Colonel Roosevelt's hobbies. The bill is liable to die a natural death in the hands of the committee.

The city of Duluth, by a vote of two to one, has adopted the commission plan of government. Opposition to the plan came from the saloons and public utilities companies.

The tax levy, on a percentage basis shows a decrease of about half a cent on the dollar, and under the present valuation is supposed to represent a more equitable distribution than last year. The income tax is yet to be considered.

Mickey Smith of Dublin, died the other day, at the age of 116. His friends say that his early demise was due to the excessive use of whiskey and tobacco.

Artist in the Family.

"Here's a picture that my aunt painted," said Mrs. Keephouse, showing a visitor through the flat. "It's a pretty frame, though."

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

THE FARMER SAMARITAN.

A young man was speeding his new motorcycle along in country road. He got into a rut, lost control of his wheel and met with a severe fall.

Dragging his machine to the side of the road, he sat down beside it. His clothes were torn. He was suffering intense pain from internal injuries. A farmer drove by in his wagon.

"Hurt yourself?" he asked.

"Yes, but I hope to be better presently."

"Running pretty fast, I reckon. Serves you fellows right. I wonder you don't have more accidents." And the farmer drove on.

A few moments later a man came along on foot. He was a farmer who from his field near by had witnessed the accident.

"Been hurt?"

"Yes."

"Well, you look rather pale. Shall I go for a doctor?"

"No, thank you. Somebody will come along directly and maybe I can go back to town."

"Maybe you can and maybe you can't. You come on with me. I live down this way. I'll hitch up and take you into town right away. It might be dangerous to wait."

In a few moments the young man, lying on some straw in the farmer's wagon, was being taken to the city. The farmer drove directly to the hospital.

Inside of two days the young man died.

The farmer had refused to accept money and besides told the doctors he would help to pay the boy's bill, if necessary.

Now—

Do you note the similarity between this story and one that was told nearly 2,000 years ago about a man who was on the way to Damascus and who fell among thieves who stripped and wounded him?

If you remember, a Levite and a priest looked at the wounded man and passed by on the other side.

Then a certain Samaritan came that way. "And when he saw him he had compassion on him." He got down off his beast and bound up the wounds of the poor fellow and poured oil and wine upon them.

And he set him on his own beast and brought him to an inn. And, moreover, he paid the bill and said if that was not enough he would be coming that way soon and would pay what was lacking.

The story was told to answer the question, "Who is my neighbor?" And at its conclusion the Master said, "Which now of these thinkest thou was neighbor to him that fell among thieves?"

It was easy to answer.

As easy as to answer the query, "Which of these thinkest thou was neighbor to the young man who fell from his motorcycle?"

Reward.

Every time we do a thing carelessly, failing to put our highest thought and our greatest skill into it, we are lessening our ability to do good work. This is the penalty that unfaithfulness to duty carries with it. But whenever we put our best into our work, exercising care in the slightest detail, we are adding to our powers. This is the reward of fidelity to each opportunity.—Blanche Cooley Blessing.

Beyond His Power.

James I, being requested by his old nurse to make her son "a gentleman," answered emphatically: "I'll make him a baronet, gin ye like, luckie, but the od'ell himself couldn't mak' him a gentleman."

DISCUSS THE RECALL
AT A MEETING HELD AT THE EAGLES' HALL

Gathering This Afternoon at Which Question is Decided—Will Probably File Papers Saturday.

There was a goodly gathering of those interested in the proposed recall of the present city commissioners held this afternoon at Eagles Hall at two-thirty. The statement that the commission had decided to decrease the number of saloons in the city from the present number to forty next July had evidently stirred the retail liquor dealers association into active support of the measure and it is stated by a person present at the meeting that every active member of that association was at today's session.

In addition there was a gathering of many who have not only passed the petition for the recall, signers of the papers, former city officials who are dissatisfied with the reforms enacted by the present commissioners and other whose business they claim has been injured by the throwing out of the dice game and the slot machines and the exclusion of women of disreputable character from the city.

It was learned that it is believed that a sufficient number of signers have been secured to file the petition, or will be by Saturday, to have it filed as originally planned. There had been some laxity in the question of securing signatures and it is said a former city official much interested in the recall, stated he would either burn the petitions already signed or that his lieutenants "get busy." The meeting this afternoon was the result of the "get busy" order.

Fancy Trimmings Mean Almost As Much to Member of House As His Salary of $7,500

(By Robert F. Wilson.) Washington, Dec. 3.—When a new representative comes to Washington he finds other perquisites to his job besides the $7,500 salary. He gets free a spacious office in one of the most beautiful office buildings in the United States. This office is furnished luxuriously for him with mahogany desks and tables, the latest metal or precious wood filing cases, rugs and the like, as well as with the latest model of any typewriter his stenographer may fancy. He needs use only the costliest grades of bond paper for his letterheads and envelopes, for he is given a stationery allowance of $125 per month, and paper, printing, pens, ink, inkwells, and all office supplies are sold to him at cost at the house stationery store. Ice, water, light, towel and chair services are free.

He is also given $125 a month for clerk hire. Some few representatives save this entire allowance by employing no clerical help. If he fails to spend all of his stationery allowance, too, he retains what he saves. On the other hand many representatives fail to make the $125 monthly pay their office help. Under the law each member is required to turn in to the clerk of the house the names of clerical help paid from the $125. In the last session Representative Rainey of Illinois, turned in the names of 25 clerks, all presumably being paid from the $125 a month.

Another perquisite is the mileage allowance of 2 cents per mile each way for one trip each session from a congressman's home to Washington. Thus, a representative from California receives $1,200 more than one from a Maryland or Virginia district adjoining the national capital.

The books at the congressional library are at the disposal of house members. When a new representative is fixing up living quarters in Washington, it is customary for him to tell employees of the library about what sort of reading matter he likes, and also the amount of shelf room he has in his apartment or house. These experts compile a complete library for the instruction and amusement of himself and his family for the winter, and the books are delivered in the library automobiles. He may keep out books as long as he wishes.

The democratic and republican cloakrooms are in reality luxurious clubrooms in which the members can relieve the boredom of dry debates by smoking, reading and talking, while sitting in the deeply upholstered lounging chairs. Time was, alas, when the member needed only to press a button to have fetched to him his favorite cocktail, but—and it is an interesting story why—no more.

Time after time the hypocritical house had virtuously voted the barrooms out of the national capitol buildings, relying, and not in vain, on senators who liked their liquor to lose the legislation in the conference committees.

In 1901, Wm. E. Shattuck's immigration bill was up, and the random debate had grown lively on the point and whenever he becomes tired of his assortment he can have them replaced with an entirely new supply of liquor selling on government reservations, which had been incorporated as part of the bill. Representative Charles B. Landis charged that Shattuck to be consistent, ought to include government reservations of every sort. There was the Pennsylvania passenger station in Washington, for instance—liquor was sold there.

"Well, for that matter," sneered Shattuck, "liquor is sold in this building. Why don't you introduce an amendment to stop it?"

"I will," said Landis, and dashed off the rider to the bill. The house passed the amendment cheerfully, strong in the faith that the senate would run to form and eliminate the dry clause. But on this occasion, however, the senate called the bluff, and liquor disappeared from the capitol except in the numerous private cabarets that might be mentioned.

BRAZIL TO SETTLE ANTI-TRUST SUIT

Edwin V. Morgan.

The government of Brazil is negotiating with Edwin V. Morgan, American ambassador at Rio Janeiro, to learn the terms on which the United States will settle the "Coffee Trust" suit under the Sherman anti-trust law. It is generally believed that any settlement would contemplate the gradual sale within a limited time on the open market of the 600,000 bags of coffee valued at $10,000,000, said to be stored in New York under the Brazilian valorization scheme, which constitutes the alleged trust.

The Brazilian state of Sao Paulo, the greatest coffee producing district in the world, is a party to the agreement which it is alleged ties up a substantial proportion of the coffee supply and increases the price.

Incentive for Living.

If a man is an invalid, and wishes to live, give him an engrossing task to perform. This is the lesson of the last months of General Grant's life, according to Mark Twain, as quoted in Harper's Magazine. After the general finished his memoirs, Mark Twain writes, "the lack of any strong interest to employ his mind enabled the tedious weariness to kill him. I think his book kept him alive several months."

Child's Narrow Escape.

A little four-year-old San Bernardino (Cal.) girl, Harriet Straug, recently had a remarkable escape from death. She picked up a rattlesnake and carried it some distance to the porch of her home, where she let the reptile bite the house dog. The dog died in agony two hours later. The dog's cries attracted notice and the parents despatched the deadly reptile before it could do further injury.

Not Much Disconcerted. A workman on a building in New York city was recently buried under tons of earth. After being rescued he shook the sand from his clothing and announced that he was "all right" and resumed work with a shovel.

An Opportunity.

Judge—"Do you swear to tell the truth, the whole truth?" Fair Witness—"It will be just perfectly lovely if you really have the time to listen."

What You Make It. Life in itself is neither good nor evil; it is the scene of good or evil, as you make it; and if you have lived a long day, you have seen all. One day is equal and like all other days; there is no other light, no other night. This very sun, this moon, these very stars, this very order and revolution of things, are all the same your ancestors enjoyed, and that shall also entertain your posterity.—Montaigne: Essays.

Dr. Wm. Sadler, author of "The Cause and Cure of Colds," says that common colds should be taken seriously, especially when they "hang on." Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a reliable household medicine for coughs and colds, equally effective for children and for grown persons. Take it when you feel a cold coming on, it will avert danger of serious results and cure quickly. Mrs. N. C. CHARMING GOWN OF CHIFFON VELVET

This charming gown is of blue chiffon velvet combined with ecru lace. The lace is edged with bands of subtle fur and is draped in a cascading effect on the skirt. White chiffon is gathered around the yoke of sheer white lace.

It is attended by widespread rains in the east and south, and by light snow-fall in the northwest. Warm southerly winds prevail in its front, throughout the Southeastern states, while cold northerly winds follow it in the northwest. Temperature of zero to 10 degrees below prevail in western Canada.

In the "gumbo" regions of the lower Mississippi valley, where the roads have been the worst in the world, progressive citizens have taken to burning the clay of the soil and spreading this material over the highways. CLEANSE YOUR LIVER AND BOWELS WITH DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS."

REMOVES THE SOUR-BILE, GASES AND CLOGGED-UP WASTE WITHOUT GRIPE OR NAUSEA. NO HEADACHE, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION, BILIOUSNESS OR COATED TONGUE.

Foul breath, coated tongue, dull throbbing headache, stomach sour and full of gases, indigestion, biliousness and a sallow complexion, mean that your thirty feet of bowels are clogged with waste matter; that these drainage organs of the body are obstructed; liver stagnant and stomach full of poisonous gases, sour bile and undigested fermenting food not properly carried off.

Most of our ills are caused by constipated bowels. We all need a laxative sometimes; nobody can doubt that. The only question is, which one is the best and that isn't a question any more. Syrup of Figs, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, must act in a harmless gentle and natural way. Syrup of Figs can be constantly used without injury. Its action is the action of fruit—of eating coarse food—of taking exercise. It is a true and effective liver and bowel cleanser and regulator.

Most folks dread physic—they shrink from the taste and after effects. Syrup of Figs is delicious, and, besides, you don't realize you have taken anything until morning, when all the clogged-up waste of the system is gently but thoroughly moved on and out of the bowels without gripping or weakness.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." This is the old reliable and only genuine, cathartic, with contempt, any other Fig Syrup recommended as good. They are imitations meant to deceive you. Read the label carefully and look for the name California Fig Syrup Company.

At The Theatre

"THE ONLY SON"

In "The Only Son" which Winchell Smith, author of "The Fortune Hunter" and "Brewster's Millions" presents a broken family ties, and in the breaking and the mending process one of the strongest and cleverest plays of the season is produced. Aside from its dramatic story, "The Only Son" possesses three strong points of merit which insure its success. It has "heart interest," it has a touch of comedy which emphasizes its tragic parts, and it keeps human curiosity keyed to wonder what next.

At the zenith of his success a millionaire husband learns of a woman's "mistake" and, grown rigid in his regard for convention, he sends the wife from his home on an outcast. In his cruelty he inflicts the punishment of forcing her to confess her indiscretion to their two children, a son and a daughter, and when she breaks down under the ordeal he tells. The daughter turns upon her mother; the son, worthless, apparently, sides with his mother. They go away; the son stands by his mother, turns to business and succeeds, and in the course of his success deals with his father, who, lured to the west, is won back after two years to the woman he always loved.

In its construction, the play is excellent. At no time does it appear as impossible. Every dramatic situation is splendidly relieved by bright lines, not one of which doesn't serve to make more impressive the chivalry of the son in shielding his mother from public disgrace and forcing his father into defiance of convention, if need be.

Thomas Ross who made a record of six months in Chicago after the play ran for three months in New York, will be remembered for his successful work in "The Fortune Hunter" and "Brewster's Millions." Mr. Ross comes to the Myers Theater, Tuesday evening, December 17, in the title role of "The Only Son."

"THE THIEF"

After having been the dramatic sensation for three years in the east, "The Thief" by Henri Bernstein, with Miss Marion Sherwood in the leading role, will be seen in this city at Myers Theater Saturday, December 7, matinee and evening. "The Thief" has a record of two years' run in New York, six months in Chicago and six months in Boston and is considered one of the biggest successes in theatrical history.

Arthur Brisbane, in an editorial in the New York said, "Women whose husbands find a good deal of money to spend with others and very little to spend on their wives may well take their husbands to see this play. Many husbands might do well to go there on their own account; they might learn things to their advantage."

"We sincerely hope that C. S. Primrose will parade this play, 'The Thief' all over the United States in all cities and towns and compel as many husbands as possible to see it."

The story of the play is well known. It tells the tale of the great love of a woman. A love so overwhelming that she becomes a criminal in order that she might deck herself in laces and gowns which she thinks will please her husband.

It is a play that will undoubtedly be one of the most notable theatrical events of the season and one of the biggest successes that has ever visited this city.

ONE OF GOLDEN STATE'S MOST POPULAR SOCIETY GIRLS SURRENDERS TO NAVY MAN

Miss Lieutenant Henry A. Orr, formerly Mabel Cramer.

San Rafael, Cal.—Miss Mable Cramer, renowned beauty of San Rafael, against whose impregnable heart other hearts by the score have dashed themselves to broken bits, has surrendered.

It came without warning, just as Miss Cramer predicted it would, and even her closest friends were quite surprised when a telegram came from Seattle the other day announcing that henceforth she would be Mrs. Lieutenant Henry A. Orr.

Mrs. Cramer had known Lieutenant Orr for just a year, having met him last fall at a cotillon given by the bachelor officers at Mare Island. She had long been a favorite in the navy set and the dashing young officer succumbed to her charms as a matter of course. He was told of the hearts she had broken, for the tale is but he would not be dismayed and the a sort of legend in the Pacific station, romance began to blossom.

A few months ago lieutenant Orr was transferred from San Francisco to Seattle. But Miss Cramer had already succumbed. To Seattle she went early in September to visit friends. The wedding is the result.

Lieutenant Orr is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Orr of Washington, and a cousin of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president-elect. He is 29 years old and was graduated in 1904 from the United States naval academy at Annapolis, where he was a member of both the football and basketball teams.

Because of her remarkable beauty and original mind, Miss Mabel Cramer was one of the best known and most popular girls in California. Three or four years ago she won third place in a beauty contest participated in by thousands of the prettiest girls in the state. Since then adventures have crowded hard and fast upon her.

Target for Bandit. A short time after the beauty contest had brought her international praise, she was driving through the woods of Marin county when a highwayman stepped into the road and tried to stop the team. Her escort whipped up the horses, and in his fire the would-be robber fired several shots at the wayfarers, but with poor aim.

Then Miss Cramer planned to go to Paris, where her aunt lived, and study for the stage. But she changed her mind at the last minute and remained in California.

A little later she showed her originality by appearing at the San Rafael baths in a common sense bathing suit, which some gossips said was of directorate cut. That was when directorate cuts were being cut, socially at least, but Miss Cramer didn't mind. She said the costume was safe, sane and conservative, besides being an aid to swimming.

So her adventures continued until two years ago, when she decided to become a trained nurse and really began in earnest. But the lure of Mare Island and cotillions and dances in town proved too engaging and Miss Cramer remained a society belle.

Marvel of Domestic Science.
A Kansas City girl recently added domestic science to her high school work, and was very beautiful of her attainments in that direction, but one morning her coffee was so strong that no one could drink it. "I'm sure I don't understand why," she explained. "I thought that it looked too strong, so I put it back on the fire and boiled it half an hour to get the strength out."

"Not for Her."
"But, madam," said the surgeon, after the woman had recovered consciousness in the hospital, "why didn't you stop when the crossing policeman held up his hand? Then you wouldn't have been struck by the automobile." "What! Me stop when Jim Meginnis holds up his hand? I'd let you know I'm his wife, an' he never saw the day when he could boss me!"—Magazine of Fun.

PATRICK TO STAKE LIBERTY IN COURT

Albert T. Patrick.

Albert T. Patrick, the New York lawyer, recently pardoned by Gov. Dix after he had spent twelve years in prison for the alleged murder of William Marsh Rice, has announced that he will fight to probate the second Rice will. He declares the forgery indictment found against him before the murder indictment was without foundation, and that he is willing to stake his liberty upon his word.

Patrick's conviction on the murder charge was based on the belief that he had forged the Rice will, under the terms of which he was given approximately $10,000,000.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

ON MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCES.

SOME months ago, during the moving of some furniture, I lost sight of a little pearl pin.

I was sure I had it on the morning the moving was done, and had the impression that I took it off and put it on the pin cushion when I was changing my dress that forenoon. I knew I had not worn it out of the house and yet I could not find it anywhere. Our maid was honest beyond the peradventure of a doubt, so after waiting some months for the pin to turn up, I said to myself—praises be that I didn't say it to anyone else—I suppose the man I had in mind, to do the moving must have stolen that pin, and he looked so honest! Well, you never can tell.

Yesterday, on opening a book which had lain upon my desk the day of the moving, I found the pearl pin between the pages. It had evidently fallen from my pin cushion into which I had thrust it rather carelessly in the haste and confusion of moving day.

And then, of course, I was very much ashamed of my suspicions and felt as if I ought to go and apologize to the moving man—except that I wouldn't dare tell him for what I was apologizing.

Do mysterious disappearances like that sometimes happen to you?

And afterwards do you usually have reason to be sorry for any unkind suspicions you have entertained? I fancy so, for that is the experience of almost all of us.

As I look back I can see that I have very seldom been suspicious of anyone in this way without having reason to regret my suspicions.

If it is a choice between accounting for a loss by the dishonesty of some person who, according to all other appearances, is honest, or by the cursedness of inanimate objects that have a mysterious way of taking to themselves wings, isn't it infinitely better to take the latter alternative?

For in the first place it is really the more likely explanation; in the second place it is infinitely kinder.

If we grow older successfully—that is if we mellow instead of growing sour—I think we are likely to have more and more faith in human nature, and to learn to give the benefit of the doubt in all such matters.

But, however, we explain such happenings to ourselves, there is one thing we can be sure enough to do, and that is not to pass on our suspicions to other folks until they are no longer merely suspicions.

The law judges a man innocent until he is proven guilty. Surely we ought to be as kind. And remember that proven guilty means something pretty definite.

How to Make Better Cough Syrup than You Can Buy

A Family Supply, Saving $2 and Fully Guaranteed.

A full pint of cough syrup—as much as you could buy for $2.50—can easily be made at home. You will find nothing that takes hold of an obstructed cough more quickly, usually ending it inside of 24 hours. Excellent, too, for croup, whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, hoarseness and other throat troubles.

Mix one quart of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, then add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

This is just laxative enough to help cure a cough, and it stimulates the appetite, which is usually upset by a cough. The taste is pleasant.

The effect of pine and sugar syrup on the inflamed membranes is well known. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in quinine and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The Pinex and Sugar Syrup recipe is now used by thousands of housewives throughout the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, but the old successful formula has never been equaled.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or we get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE WEIGHT PROBLEM.

Lean pug dogs and fat greyhounds are rare because it is constitutional for them to be otherwise, and the same is true of men. One who is constitutionally thin will find it difficult to reach normal weight and vice versa. The mental state has much to do with body weight. As a rule persons of highly developed mental organization are thin while those of even temper are more likely to be fat. One who worries constantly can not gain in flesh. Often a change of surroundings is more necessary than a change in diet.

Croupy Coughs and Wheezy Colds

The quickest simplest way to rid the children of dangerous croupy coughs and wheezy stuffy colds is to give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It gives almost instant relief and stops a cough promptly. It soothes and heals. Contains no opiates. "H. L. Blomquist, Esq., Wis., says: 'My wife considers Foley's Honey and Tar Compound the best cough cure and it gives the best results.'"

SERVING A DINNER.

Serving a dinner, like manners, cannot be done without daily practice to have things run smoothly. If the maid who serves you is allowed to do it in a careless, shipshod manner when no guests are present, she will blunder and become nervous from too much to remember when guests are present.

The daily habit of doing things as nicely as possible can always be "read by those who run."

As there is a vast majority of people who have no maid, or who hire one for an occasion, if she is well taught will follow directions easily. A maid must keep her head, move quietly and quickly, see the need and anticipate the request. A good waitress is an artist as well as a mind reader.

A long, elaborate dinner with an untrained waitress is exceedingly tiresome and no amount of wit or repartee will make it anything but a bore. In serving, do not overload the plate. At a large dinner no one will ask for a second helping. It is always considered a tribute to the cook to ask for a second helping if such has been provided, when few guests are present.

The dishes "outside the subject," otherwise "hors d'oeuvres," come with the soup, and may be placed before the dinner is announced, which is the usual custom. These consist of such things as olives, radishes, celery and such accessories. Radishes are usually removed with the soup, but salted nuts are passed during the entire meal.

Foods that are hot should be served on hot plates, and cold foods on well-chilled plates. This is something that is often entirely neglected and will spoil an otherwise delightful meal.

Those who will accept carefully cooked and ill-served meals daily need not look for good service in time of many guests.

EVENING GOWN IN POMPADOR SILK

This attractive evening gown is developed in pompadour silk and all-over lace. The lace forms a belt over the right side of the corsage, terminating with a bow of black velvet at the left side of the front. A band of fur and a ruffle of lace finish the fichu. On the skirt the lace is draped down the side of the front, over the right side, part of it being draped up the back at part forming the train. A point of the silk forms the points on the left side of the corsage, and these are held by beads over the shoulder.

The Secret of Charm at Seventy

SHE has had three husbands," a woman was saying, as the club-women settled into their seats upon the appearance of the noted speaker, scheduled for the afternoon.

The listener looked toward the platform with interest. A woman who had had three husbands must either have great charm or great determination.

Without doubt, this one had great charm. She may also have had the determination. But if so, she was clever enough to conceal it. But of the charm there was no doubt.

She was a woman in her seventies. But except for her snow-white hair, there was little suggestion of age about her. And even her hair, though its color betokened the passing of the years, gave no other indication of the flight of time. It was softly waved, arranged most becomingly in coronet fashion, and was quite as much a crown of glory as though it had been of its earlier golden hue. Her eyes were a clear blue, her complexion fresh, her figure straight. Her dress was a soft old blue with a touch of fine lace at the throat. She gave the impression of abundant life, of cheer, wholesome beautiful life. One knew it was charm and not determination that had captured the three husbands.

And then she began to speak, and she held her audience for an hour with an interesting, forceful, illuminating and inspiring talk on one of the vital topics of the day that affected women. And when she was through, one felt that not only had she personal charm, but she had a forceful personality that could hold the interest her charm had aroused. Her three husbands must have enjoyed life with her.

But what she was, as she stood there, any woman can be if she wishes to. Her complexion and her figure meant, she had exercised self-control in the matter of living. She had not over-indulged herself in injurious foods. She had not lived lazily. She had taken that care of her body that had kept it healthy and properly developed.

Her hair and her dress meant that she was careful of her toilet. As the years came, she did not grow lax and careless. She groomed herself as carefully, she was as dainty as a girl of sixteen.

And her address meant that she kept in touch with the affairs of the times. She did not let herself become dull and uninteresting. She had a mind and she used it.

And what woman, if she developed herself in this way, but would be charming? She might not perhaps secure the three husbands, for there might not be enough to go round in this triple fashion. And their desirability might also be questioned by some. But the desirability of such charm and such personality would be questioned by none. Most of us would like to have these qualities. But we do not want them enough to make the effort to get them. That's the root of the whole matter. We may not like to own it to ourselves. But we will admit that if they would come to us while sitting in our easy chair or riding about in a motor, we would accept them most gladly. But the effort required to go after them is more than we wish to make. And so we look a bit enviously at this woman of seventy, and sigh a bit, and say she is a wonder, and wish we were like her, and then settle back into our easy chair, and as we reach for the latest novel, console ourselves with the reflection, "Oh, well, we couldn't be like her if we tried. So what's the use in trying?"

But suppose she had said that?

Domestic Science DEPARTMENT

CONDUCTED BY Mrs. Alice Gitchell Kirk

"Enough is as good as a feast." "Never say 'I cannot afford to entertain.' A cup of tea, a piece of bread and butter, with a welcome, is the very best so-called 'entertaining' possible."

It is not so much what we have as how we serve it and the welcome guests receive when they enter the stranger's gates.

I shall never forget the hospitality of an English woman who met at York, England, this summer. It was a public lecture, and she did not even know our names, but we did have in common, and she knew we were Americans.

"Won't you come to our garden party tomorrow night? My husband is ex-lord mayor of York, and we open our house once a year for a garden party, and you will see one of the oldest houses in York, dating back to the thirteenth century." It is needless to say we accepted this most cordial invitation, but it is the welcome we received and not the refreshments which we shall never forget.

I am giving a few one-course simple luncheons which are easily prepared by the most inexperienced.

Utensils—Broad sauce pan, cleaver, measuring cup, tablespoon, vegetable knife.

Put the butter in the saucepan over a slow fire, cover the bottom of the pan with thin slices of bacon. Cover the bacon with a layer of onions cut in rings. When the bacon begins to smoke and brown a very little, add the pieces of chicken, flesh side down and several dashes of pepper or paprika with liver and heart on top. Cover closely and cook over a very slow fire for one and one-half hours, or until tender. When half done, season with one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt. When ready the chicken should be a beautiful rich brown. Remove this to a hot platter and add the cream to the saucepan, which is set over a slow fire. Stir all the time until a rich brown sauce is made. Do not boil. Season with a little more salt if necessary and pour over the chicken. Garnish with a large bunch of parsley at the neck and send to the table; or it may be cut in pieces first before laying on the platter.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please give me a good recipe to quit loving the boys. (2)—Is it possible to love more than one boy at once. (3)—Which is the best for a girl to have: A true friend or a true boy friend? (4)—Is a girl of 16 too young to go a long distance with a boy of 20?

LOVESICK.

(1)—Well, this is certainly a new question? Common sense is the only thing I know of. If you haven't your dear, ask your mother or your aunt, or some steady old person, to stay with you all the time. Never go out without taking along somebody like that and never see any of the boys unless you have the safe companionship of a staid elderly person. That will keep you from demonstrating your love away.

(2)—But it's puppy love. (3)—Both and many of them. (4)—Yes indeed.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I'm a girl of 20 and have been keeping steady company with a young man. He always treated me well. A few weeks ago I was invited to a party by another young man—we were old friends. I accepted the invitation thinking nothing of my friend. But he came quite late in the evening and saw me with another fellow. I felt quite ashamed and somewhat embarrassed, but he treated me well and asked to call on me at a certain time. I told him I would be delighted to have him call, but on account of business he failed to come. Now he is keeping company with another girl. How can I win him back? (2)—Give me a sure cure for superfluous hairs on the face and arms.

LONESOME.

(1)—I'm afraid this young man is indifferent to you. Or, he may be "touchy." You had a perfect right to go with other young men if you were not engaged to marry him just as he has a perfect right to go with other girls under the same circumstances. All you can do is to be very sweet and pleasant when you see him, and casually ask him to drop in for a visit when he feels like it. If he wants to come, he will; if not, just forget him.

(2)—The electric needle is the only sure cure.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a married woman and I love another man. He used to be my schoolmate. My husband is a very busy man and doesn't stay home much, while my old schoolmate calls often. Shall I let him continue his attentions? I cannot live without him. I dread the thought of going into court for a divorce. Would it be proper to elope with him and live abroad the rest of my life?

You cannot get a divorce from your husband and if you elope you will end just like several thousand other married women who think they can't live without some certain man who isn't married to them. You'll Obliging Clerk.

An out-of-town man walked into a Fort Scott store and asked if the "boss" was in. A clerk who sat lazily gazing into space blinked several times, muttered his lips, and lapsed back into his former stage. "I say, is the boss in?" Inquired the man in not a very mild tone. "No, he's gone out," returned the clerk, without taking his eyes off the space. "Will he be back after dinner?" Inquired the man. "Nope," yawned the clerk, "that's what he went out for."—Kansas City Star.

HIS RISE TO POWER

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER,
Author of
"The Man Higher Up"
Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

Whitledge, the famous lawyer brought from Steel City to defend Sheehan, brought his brilliant peroration to a close. The audience relapsed into an expectant silence, all eyes fixed on the district attorney. For a moment he remained as he had sat throughout the plea for the defense, motionless, leaning a little forward and staring fixedly at the wall behind the judge, as though he saw a vision.

The moment ended. He rose and stood before the jury box, first addressing the court. He smiled gravely at the jurors. It had taken a whole day's session to select them, but he knew them and that they were well chosen. Then the smile faded from his lips and eyes, replaced by a look to which his neighbors were growing accustomed. He began to speak.

"Gentlemen of the jury, what I have to do is not pleasant. But there is a thing called duty."
As the first words fell Murchell's interest leaped. He knew that he was seeing a man mount to a climax in his life. From the beginning the audience was caught in the man's spell by something that breathed through his voice and that had been absent from Whitledge's perfrigid periods. He had a clear, flexible voice and knew how to use it.

The speech had been skillfully planned. At first he confined his argument to the jury and the case at bar. Logically he marshaled the evidence against the defendant and analyzed the defense. Then when he felt that he had brought intellectual conviction to the jury, but because he believed a verdict of guilty would be worthless unless it aroused a common horror for the crime.

Never afterward in a speech did John reach quite the same heights as on the afternoon when the bright blade of his young indignation cut into the consciences of his hearers. The matter became deeply personal with them. Each man suddenly felt himself aggrieved, felt that a shameful attempt had been made to take advantage of his good faith and trust. And then, even while they were condemning Sheehan, John seemed to arraign them. He set them to asking the question, What part have I in this crime? Such offenses are possible only among a people asleep. They were both aggrieved and aggressive.

Senator Murchell sat to all outward seeming impassive. He listened, as astonished as the rest, but with understanding and—he was himself amazed to mark it—sandy. For he read in the ardent face and words a passion for a hopeless ideal. So much power, he thought, going to waste! For he knew, better than did those who possessed it, the power of moral passion controlled—but always properly controlled! Was there not some way to bind this force to his interest?

Bribery at the polls and falsification of election returns, familiar weapons of machine politics, so long used that they had ceased to arouse horror and revolt in the careless, enlashed hearts of the people, were John's text. They explained the continuance of the machine in power. They shed a bright light, too, on the so-called genius of certain political leaders at which men marveled as at some miraculous manifestation of godlike mind—it was not genius, merely crude, primitive dishonesty requiring the direction of no commanding intellect, needing nothing but the will to debauch others' honor. "It is the case of government by individual craft and greed against government by the law that is the expression of the moral sense of the people," he said, and sat down. The audience stirred uneasily. Murchell smiled grimly.

The voice of the judge was cold and even, devoid of emotion, as he began to instruct the jury. Critical listeners observed that his charge favored the defendant rather more strongly than the evidence seemed to require. They attributed it to his anxiety not to be biased by the fact that the district attorney was his son. Judge Dunmeade was said to possess an admirably judicial temperament. The jury, importantly led by the fat bailiff, filed out of the courtroom. There were no other cases on the day's list, and the judge stalked down from the bench to await the verdict in his chambers. John went to his office. Senator Murchell and Whitledge conducted the drooping Sheehan to the witness room away from the curious eyes of the crowd. Most of the spectators waited to see the end of the drama.

A half hour later the buzz of conversation suddenly ceased. The judge was returning to the bench. Sheehan, with Whitledge and Murchell, took his seat by the table. They were followed by John. Then the jury filed back into the box.

"Gentlemen of the jury, hearken to your verdict as the court hath recorded it. You find the defendant guilty as indicted. And so say you all?" said the clerk.

The jurors nodded. Sheehan fell back in his chair with an audible groan. Two big tears coursed ludicrously down his fat cheeks. But nobody laughed. He plucked anxiously at Murchell's sleeve.

"Have I got to go to jail?" he whimpered.

Murchell drew away from the touch. "Not unless our friend Whitledge has forgotten how to delay justice."

The jury was discharged. Whitledge informed the court that the defense would move for a new trial, bail was renewed, and the court was adjourned. The audience slowly made its way out into the square, where little knots of noisy, excited men gathered.

John saw Sheehan standing forlornly by the table. The big, ponderous figure with the misery shining out of his eyes seemed very pathetic. And, after all, Sheehan was the worst victim of the system. Impulsively John went over to him. Sheehan suddenly seized one of John's hands in both his own. "Johnny, can't you get me out of this—let me off? I'll get out of here—never go into politics again, so help me!"

John's heart gave him a wrench as he shook his head. "I wish I could, Sheehan," he replied honestly. "But you're out of my hands now."

He turned away sadly, no sense of triumph in his victory.
When he appeared at the door of the courthouse some one raised a cheer. It passed along from group to group, until all in the square had joined in a short, sharp salute. It was not an hysterical demonstration, but unusual for calm, self-contained New Chelsea. It lasted only a few seconds.

"Young man," said Senator Murchell, "enjoy this moment. It won't last long. You are at your apex—you are a hero among your neighbors. But they are cheering you, not what you said."

"Not me, but what I said. They see a principle."
"You're not the first man who has held that delusion—to his sorrow."

CHAPTER IX, Criticisms and Wiles.

PROFESSOR said that Senator Murchell maintained his legal residence in New Chelsea only because an unwritten law required each end of the state to be represented in the senate, and the vacancy which he had been elected to fill had been from the western district. This was only half a truth. He really liked these men and women among whom his youth had been spent, who looked upon him half familiarly, half in awe, and who, until the late uprising and the advent of John Dunmeade, had followed unquestioningly his political gospel. Most of the time he spent, from the exigencies of his position, in Washington or in the big house in Adelphia; but as he grew older he came to look forward more and more eagerly to the summer months that supported his "legal residence."

He looked, hesitating, toward the old colonial house across the street. Then he started toward it. Must the habit of a lifetime be broken merely because a son of that house had leveled a lance against him? And, besides, there was a small matter of business to transact. He perceived the figure of an old woman on a bench under the trees, darning industriously, and he smiled at first in amusement. Then the smile became gentler.

She looked up as he approached. He held out his hand. "Good afternoon, Miss Roberta."

"Good afternoon, Will Murchell." She continued her darning. "I'll not shake hands," she answered his gesture coldly. "I don't think I'll ever shake hands with you again. John says you're a dangerous man. John is right."

"I inferred from his speech," he answered with a twinkle, "that he held some such opinion. Were you at the trial?"

"I was not! You may sit down," she commanded, making room for him. "Because I want to ask you a question." He obeyed. "What have you been doing to Hugh and our John? This house has been like a funeral ever since these trials began. Hugh has been as grumpy as a dog with a boil. And John—he doesn't say much, but he feels it. It's this politics! I wish," she concluded ruefully, "a plague'd carry off all you politicians."

"But, Roberta, who'd run the country?"

Miss Roberta sniffed. "I guess the country could run itself better than you politicians do."

"So there's coolness between the judge and John, eh? I suppose they've fallen out over the trials. Naturally! John is just a hot-headed idealist, while the judge is a practical man."

"A practical man!" she sniffed tartly. "If you'd been doing for the judge for nearly thirty years you wouldn't call him that, I guess. Why, he even believes that you're going to put him in the supreme court!"

"And you don't?"

"Of course not! I tell him so, but he won't believe me. He's so puffed up with his own importance and selfishness he won't listen to sense and tries to make his son's life miserable."

"Roberta," he said abruptly, "try to keep John out of politics."

"Because he is fighting you?"

"Think over the Sheehan case—think it over."

"That," he said sententiously, "might be a sufficient reason. But I'm not thinking of that. It isn't the game for a man of his sort."

"You didn't think of that when you believed you could use him. I wish I could keep him out. But we Dunmeades are set in our opinions. He'll go on fighting, now he's started, until he breaks himself against your hardness or becomes—like you."

He got up abruptly and went into the house. In the library he found Judge Dunmeade before his desk, scratching away at an opinion. With count heavy dignity which he imparted even to the smallest actions of life the judge waved Murchell to a seat.

"That son of yours gave us something of a surprise to-day. Looks as though Sheehan would have to go over the road. Unless," Murchell added inquiringly, "there's a chance to win on appeal?"

"No. John tried his case carefully. There were no errors."

"Er—about what ought to be the sentence, do you think?"

It would not be correct to say that the judge assumed a judicial air; that, consciously, he always wore. It merely became heavier. "What should you suggest?"

Murchell made a slight motion with his hand to indicate that any suggestion from him was a negligible matter, and answered, "Would four months be too much?"

"H-m-m! One must remember, of course, that four months for Sheehan would be a heavier sentence than a year for another." The judge cleared his throat. "I'll take it under consideration."

A queer smile softening the lines of his mouth the senator sat staring at the portrait of Thomas Dunmeade. "John," he said at last, "made a good speech, eh, judge?"

"The elocution was good," was the carefully considered answer. "But to think a Dunmeade should voice such rabid radicalism, such wild sentimentality! John's course will not affect the matter we discussed last winter, will it?"

"You mean the Justiceship? My influence in the organization is a little uncertain just at present. These trials haven't helped either."

"I have that also against my son," the judge said angrily. "He has made it more difficult for his father to realize a lifelong ambition. Besides," he added, "attacking my best friend. He is too selfish and set in his opinions to consider his father's interest. He doesn't get it from me. He is," the judge concluded, "his mother's son."

He was not a sentimental man. He did not "love the memory" of Anne Dunmeade nor indulge in sweetly sad retrospection. He thought of her now merely as marking one stage of his development. He remembered her as a gentle yet high spirited thing full of ardent enthusiasms and with an unshakable belief—it struck him now as almost pathetic—in the goodness of her fellows and the ultimate triumph of "the right." There must have been, he thought, unsuspected possibilities—possibilities that had not been realized—in him since he could love this woman. He was far from ready to admit that their realization would have been profitable.

"His mother's son. I guess that explains him." He rose. "About that Justiceship—I'll see what can be done. But I promise nothing definitely so far ahead. You understand that?"

"Certainly," the judge assented. "But I expect you to do your best. I feel," he added with dignity, "that my services to my country and to my party warrant my expectation. And I ought to draw the old soldier vote to the ticket."

"And, Judge," Murchell concluded, "think over the Sheehan sentence—think it over." He went out of the room.

PUSH AMENDMENTS TO CONSTITUTION

Representative Henry Cummings.

When congress reconvenes early in December at least two important amendments to the U. S. constitution will be urged. Representative Henry Cummings, chairman of the rules committee of the house, will push the proposition for changing the date of presidential inaugurations from March 4 to the last Thursday in April. Senator Cummings has charge of the amendment providing for a six-year non-election term for the president of the United States, which will probably pass the senate early in the session and be taken up by the house.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, December 5, 1872—Last Night at the Court Street Church: Rev. E. D. Huntley was sustained by the presence of a large audience during his lecture on "Misunderstood," last evening at the Court street church, and the lecture was in every respect worthy of the patronage bestowed upon it. The music last night was good too. The receipts of the entertainment amounted to $134.75 and as the expenses are light, most of that sum will be added to the poor relief fund of the Young Men's Association under whose auspices the affair was conducted.

Christmas Entertainment: At a meeting of the committee chosen by the teachers of the Congregational Sabbath school last week Saturday evening, it was decided to have a Christmas Eve entertainment for the school and society. Christmas trees, with presents and a good time in general are the order of exercises. Brief Items: The Holly Manufacturing Company are preparing an estimate of the cost of water works for this city. The oratorio of Esther will be given about the first of February in grander style than ever before.

BY WALT MASON

Dear Woodrow Wilson: Let me say how glad I am you won't. And now the smoke has cleared away, and all the shouting's done, it won't be out of place, I guess, to take the liberty of telling you that your success was largely due to me. I organized three Wilson clubs at Madison-on-the-Hill, when all the other village dubs stood up for Ted or Bill. While others raved about the flag and made a frightful din, I wore a red bandana rag and Woodrow Wilson p in I punched old Billy Blinn's head, and thus rebuked his crimes, when he came round one day and said that you would bring hard times. I had your picture on my porch to paralyze your foes, and packed around a big tin torch which leaked and spoiled my clothes. My pup's named Woodrow and my cat your honored surname bears; an old-time Allen Thurman hat your correspondent wears. I've yelled my larynx out of joint, and now that you've the chance, your faithful friend you should appoint ambassador to France. Don't lay this claim of mine aside for less important things; an audience should be denied to statesmen, consuls, kings, till you've rewarded those who wore your colors in the fray, till you have honored those who bore the burden of the day.

Small troubles threaten you, and your patience will be sorely tried. While thus annoyed, you will not be able to give your best judgment to new enterprises or changes. A slow but steady course is best.

Those born today will be of roving disposition. This can never be wholly changed, but while very young, they should be patiently taught the traits which will make the journeys a source of advancement and prosperity, rather than alms.

Sibyllant Sam did not expect to do murder during his visit to New York. For it was a business trip and Sibyllant Sam was never one to mix business and pleasure. Anyone in Wyoming will tell you that. How it came to pass that he killed a Broadway waiter had best be told by Sam himself, for novels in the first person seem to be coming into vogue again.

"But be it from me to destroy anything useful on the face of the earth, but this was just naturally forced upon me. Sippin' me soup, I was, in the eatin'-room of a swell-lookin' shack called the Plaza, and it was such corkin' good soup, with noodles of four colors or I'm a liar, that I sure thought I'd have to have another go at it."

"Waiter! I says, 'stop standin' there gawkin' like a sick bull calf and fetch me another dish of this here chow!' I thought, y'know, if I treated him like a gentleman he might fetch me an extra big fishin'."

DINNER STORIES

Johnny had been told to sit down and study his lesson quietly. In a few minutes his mother heard a fretful voice exclaim: "Mother, didn't you tell me the other day that God knows everything?"

"Why, of course, my son," she answered. "Well," he responded, dubiously, "I've been waiting for ten minutes for him to tell me how much tea times five is and I don't believe he knows."

At a long row of seaside bathing-rooms, an important young man walked up to the door of one of the compartments, and, knocking at the same, testily inquired: "When is thunder are you going to get those trousers on?" There was a faint smile, and a shivery voice replied: "When I get married I suppose." The young man faintly. He had mistaken the door.

Professor Mahaffy was once examining a man who had put himself down as an "agnostic" on entering college. He was having a hard time at Mahaffy's hands over some "crux" passages in a Greek book. "I believe, this," said Mahaffy, "that you are an agnostic in religion, matter."

"Crude Art in Europe." Americans sometimes think that it is only our country that is troubled with crude art in the form of graceless statues of public men. But occasionally, at least, Europeans are moved to protest against similar afflictions. The statues of Bjornson and Ibsen in Christiania have evoked strong protest, and a movement has been started for their removal. Bjornson's son declares that the statues "look like chessmen who have climbed up on a pile of their wares."

Stern Call to Duty. In a Shropshire (England) parish magazine the following curious comment occurs: "All bachelors and spinsters in our parish seem to have come to the conclusion that the Latin poet was right in saying that no life is equal to that of the unmarried, for there has been no wedding in our church since last July, and it is 20 years since the marriage service was for so long unused."

The Busy Woman's Day. It begins early, ends late, and is full of work. She often has kidney trouble without knowing it. Her back aches, and she is tired and worn out. Sleeps poorly, is nervous, no appetite. Her bladder gives her trouble too. Foley Kidney Pills will cure all that and make her strong and well. Mrs. Lena Beyer, 12 Frederick St., Auburn, N. Y. Says: "Three boxes of Foley Kidney Pills were all that were needed to make me strong and well." They are the best medicine made for kidney and bladder disorders. Try them. Badger Drug Co.

Diet Suited to the Emotions. The tree is known by his fruit. Kean, the actor, always suited his diet to his part. When he had to play the lover he ate mutton; for murderers he took beef, very underdone; and pork for tyrants.

If you have real estate to sell try a want ad as a solicitor.

Bird Sanctuaries. Bird sanctuaries recently have been established in England and in Australia. An attempt is now being made to protect the herons of Egypt, from which country the birds rapidly are disappearing before the guns of the plume hunters. The bird-protective work is becoming world-wide in its manifestation. All countries finally are becoming to realize the service which the birds render to man.

DO THEIR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING THIS WEEK

Dad's fat and forty and the boys are wiry and six and nine. Mother's gone with them heretofore but this year Dad's the careful shepherd.

Remember the first time you set out as a boy to do your Christmas shopping? How the marks looked so big and your little dimes and quarters looked so small and how the salespeople overawed you? Sure you do and that's why Dad is going to show his boys this week how a man shops!

And won't they have a time! Sure! And won't there be a bond between Dad and his boys that will hold them dearer to his heart than ever before?
